

LJMU Research Online

Lowe, D

Nice attack reminds France the state can't keep you safe 100% of the time

<http://researchonline.ljmu.ac.uk/id/eprint/3902/>

Article

Citation (please note it is advisable to refer to the publisher's version if you intend to cite from this work)

Lowe, D (2016) Nice attack reminds France the state can't keep you safe 100% of the time. The Conversation.

LJMU has developed LJMU Research Online for users to access the research output of the University more effectively. Copyright © and Moral Rights for the papers on this site are retained by the individual authors and/or other copyright owners. Users may download and/or print one copy of any article(s) in LJMU Research Online to facilitate their private study or for non-commercial research. You may not engage in further distribution of the material or use it for any profit-making activities or any commercial gain.

The version presented here may differ from the published version or from the version of the record. Please see the repository URL above for details on accessing the published version and note that access may require a subscription.

For more information please contact researchonline@ljmu.ac.uk

<http://researchonline.ljmu.ac.uk/>

Academic rigour, journalistic flair

Arts + Culture Business + Economy Education Environment + Energy Health + Medicine Politics + Society Science + Technology Brexit

Nice attack reminds France the state can't keep you safe 100% of the time

July 15, 2016 4.34pm BST

The morning after. EPA/Olivier Anrigo

- Email
- Twitter 43
- Facebook 15
- LinkedIn 1
- Print

France has paid witness to another terrorist massacre, this time when a man ploughed a lorry 2km down the Promenade des Anglais in Nice during the July 14 Bastille Day celebrations. Already 84 people have been confirmed dead, while 50 more are critically injured. In response, the French authorities extended the temporary state of emergency imposed after co-ordinated attacks in Paris killed well over 100 people in November.

This is a devastating blow after a period of relative calm. In the last few weeks, France successfully held the Euro 2016 football tournament without any terrorism-related incidents. Clearly intelligence-gathering and exchange between the security service and the police plays an integral part in preventing terrorist attacks, and for

Author

David Lowe
Principal Lecturer in Law,
Liverpool John Moores University

Disclosure statement

David Lowe does not work for, consult, own shares in or receive funding from any company or organisation that would benefit from this article, and has disclosed no relevant affiliations beyond the academic appointment above.

Partners

Liverpool John Moores University provides funding as a member of The Conversation UK.

The Conversation's partners

The Conversation UK receives funding from Hefce, Hefcw, SAGE, SFC, RCUK, The Nuffield Foundation, The Ogden Trust, The Royal Society, The Wellcome Trust, Esmée Fairbairn Foundation and The Alliance for Useful Evidence, as well as sixty five university members.

the European Championships, the EU's policing agency, Europol, assigned hundreds of extra staff to speed up the flow of intelligence to the French security and police forces.

Then there's the state of emergency imposed after the horrific events of last November, which was due to expire later this month. This decree gives the security service and the police increased powers of search and arrest to help them prevent terrorist attacks. The high number of arrests in France since the November attacks showed how effective these powers have been, and the activities of terrorist cells have reportedly been seriously disrupted and their capability degraded.

Reports are still coming out about the driver of the lorry, as Mohamed Lahouaiej Bouhlel. He apparently had no previous convictions for terrorism-related offences, only "petty crime", and as yet there has been no indication that he was closely involved with radical Islamist groups. Islamic State has so far not claimed the attack.

The truck used in the Nice attack. EPA/Ian Langsdon

If "lone-wolf", low-tech attackers such as Bouhlel are the sorts of threats they face, the agencies of the state face an almost impossible task even when they've had their powers extended, as they have under the state of emergency.

Ultimately, the critical problem raised by the events in Nice can be boiled down to one question: how was someone able to drive a lorry through a packed crowd until he was forced to stop and shot by the police? This defeats the central aim of the state of emergency: to stop attacks by enabling the security and police agencies to arrest suspects before they can make put their plans into action.

We did see how effective these powers can be prior to and during the European football tournament, where liaison between French and Belgian police led to a number of arrests. Tens of thousands of personnel were deployed, and the main security problem at the games was ultimately not terrorism but fan violence.

View the full list

Republish this article

We believe in the free flow of information. We use a Creative Commons Attribution NoDerivatives licence, so you can republish our articles for free, online or in print.

Republish

The tragic events in Nice recall the saying by the Provisional IRA after the 1984 Brighton bomb, which nearly killed the then UK prime minister, Margaret Thatcher: the state has to be lucky 100% of the time, whereas the terrorist only has to be lucky once. Tragically, this time, the state was caught out.

Policing Terrorism France Counter-terrorism Nice attack

Tweet Share Get newsletter

You might also like

How can French authorities prevent a terrorist attack during Euro 2016?

Nice attack brings a difficult question into sharp focus: why France?

Brussels terror attacks: a continent-wide crisis that threatens core European ideals

Belgian government saw terror attack coming so why did it fail to stop it?

20 Comments

Oldest Newest

Comment on this article

Warren Dawson

Recommend

What was Hollande's message to the French people following this outrage? "Get used to it."

This singularly defeatist statement indicates just how close hapless France - and Europe - is to complete social and political catastrophe.

3 days ago • Report

Reply

Christine James

Recommend

In reply to Warren Dawson

I must have missed that comment. I recall Hollande saying that France was strong. Cherry picking is a boring and limiting line of argument.

3 days ago • Report

Reply

Show all comments

Most popular on The Conversation

In defence of wasps: why squashing them comes with a sting in the tale

What our faces can tell other people about the state of our health

Do women's periods really synch when they spend time together?

Why scientists' failure to understand GM opposition is stifling debate and halting progress

I was a white police officer in the US – I know how deep the crisis of racism is

What it's like to be gay and a Muslim

Brexistentialism: Britain, the drop out nation in crisis, meets Jean-Paul Sartre

Meet Theresa May, Britain's new prime minister

Here's what happens to your brain when you give up sugar for Lent

Theresa May has clout to last as PM – if she can contain Brexit economic fallout

Events

[Why is it time to revisit the Moon? — Cardiff CF10 3NP, Caerphilly \[Caerffili GB-CAF\]](#)

In Conversation with Ian Rankin — Aberdeen, Aberdeenshire

Radical Technology Revisited — Corsham, Wiltshire

Heritage Open Day — Egham, Surrey

Science and Society public lecture - Why is investing in Science and higher education essential for civil society? — Liverpool, Liverpool

MORE EVENTS

Expert Database

Find experts with knowledge in:*

THE CONVERSATION

Community

Community standards

Republishing guidelines

Friends of The Conversation

Research and Expert Database

Events

Our feeds

Donate

Company

Who we are

Our charter

Our team

Our blog

Partners and funders

Contributing institutions

Resource for media

Contact us

Stay informed

Subscribe to our Newsletters

United Kingdom

Follow us on social media

